

LIONS AND LIONESSES GREET A SON OF ACADIA IN AN EVENING OF FUNABOUT THIS — AND —
ABOUT THAT

By OLIVER GEDEIST

Easter is coming. For Christians, theoretically this season is one of devotional gratitude for the blessings of the Savior—for the resurrection as described in the gospels.

Introspection, self-examination, is well worth while for all who are orthodox in the Christian faith. This is so because there are indications that the "faithful" may have forgotten to be faithful to an IDEAL while continuing the outward manifestations of faithfulness.

This habit of going through the motions while neglecting the spiritual implications of the IDEAL is not exclusive to Christians. The habit has been followed by all faiths. It began ago, in the dark days of the beginnings of all "religion."

Other habits spring up—habits peculiar to each religion. Among these habits which afflict Christianity is the habit of dishonoring the spirit of the religion with lies. With Christians this is evidenced at the two most important and serious seasons—Christmas and Easter.

We deal with an Easter lie now, since Easter soon will be here. I refer to the Easter rabbit or "bunny," a commercialism which developed and has been accepted as an essential part of this one "religion." A child learns after a very few years, that the Easter bunny DOES NOT lay eggs and that the RECORDS of the beginning and development of the Christian faiths include no reference to such a silly idea.

Parents take upon themselves a great responsibility in beginning their children's lives with falsehood. The renewing of life, the "resurrection," the observance of the beginning of a new season after winter's blight—all were observed in the cloudy period of the beginning of our civilization.

Little minds nurtured on truth made beautiful by living and telling will be more receptive to deeply significant truths as they grow older, will be more amenable to moral and spiritual obligations. It is bad to start children's lives with lies.

Another type of "bunny." They are the little "cuties" who seem to think that life consists of "cuddling" and fall into the arms of any amorous animal available. Widespread promiscuous sex indulgences, with consequent disease and illegitimacy, spring from failure of parents to order their own minds and speech as a guide for little girls and boys.

Religion can be such only when its influence leads masses to understanding of life values before degeneration of mind and soul creates a bar to understanding.

Miss Haas Sues
For Insurance

Early this week Miss Katherine Haas of New Lenox filed suit in Will County circuit court for a share in two life insurance policies of her late brother Peter Haas.

The action is against Mrs. Mary Haas, widow of Peter Haas. At the same time an injunction was asked restraining the Gleaner Life Insurance Society and the Rockford Insurance Company from paying the insurance to Mrs. Haas.

According to the complaint, Miss Haas was to be the beneficiary of two $1000 policies in event of death of the insured before maturity. An agreement, it is alleged, was that Miss Haas was to pay one-half of the premiums and in the event of maturity before the insured's death she was to receive one-half of the principal sum.

It is alleged that the plaintiff carried out her part of the agreement, and also that while both policies had matured prior to the death of Mr. Haas March 9 neither had been cashed.

Miss Haas is also asking the court to determine the amount of money due her from the policies.

Attorneys for the plaintiff are O. R. Laraway and Robert E. Higgins.

SALE DATES

March 28—Harry Bettenhausen, Manhattan
March 31—William Daul and Harry Schumacher, Tinley Park.

Lions were on the loose in Frankfort Tuesday night. There were Lions wearing green, Lions' ladies wearing green—in fact, everyone in the nearly 200 attending the annual charter night fun and frolic party wore green.

The evening's entertainment began with a banquet prepared by the ladies of St. Peter's Evangelical church.

Top speaker of the evening was Andre Mouton of the board of commissioners of the Port of New Orleans, a direct descendant of Gabriel of Longfellow's "Evangeline," who was one of the Acadians forced to leave their early home in what is now Nova Scotia.

A humorous speaker, Mr. Mouton capped an evening of happy fun with a story of the Acadians and of their expulsion, and of their lives from that time to now in Louisiana.

The musical program was under the direction of Art Lambrecht, who directed the singing of Irish songs, including an improvised quartette composed of "Piccolo" Doc Hedges, Mrs. Leonard Pearson, State's Attorney Burke, and Mrs. Eddie Hirsch, who sang, as might be expected, "The Wearin' O' the Green."

Toastmaster was the Rev. Erich Bizer of St. Peter's Evangelical church who contributed much to the occasion with Irish humor. Introductions of officers and others participating in the preparations for the affair were made by Lion President George Sangmeister, who spoke of the loyalty and hard work always to be expected of Lions and their wives in any club affairs.

President Sangmeister also referred to the fact that a former past president, William Semmler, founder and publisher of The News-Bulletin, had passed away since the last annual meeting.

AT LIONS' CLUB MEET

Mr. Sangmeister presented Region 1 Deputy District Governor Everett R. Mitchell of Morris, who complemented the club on its achievements.

Setting for the banquet, arranged by a committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. W. V. Hedges, followed St. Patrick's feast. Running down the center of the long tables were green and white crepe paper streamers, sets of lighted green candles and green paper flags with gold harps on the center of each flag. There was an unique arrangement of large wooden bowls filled with Irish potatoes and clay pipes.

Some Fun Lights

Doc O'Hedges and his wife had just arrived from Killarney, or somewhere like that. Must be, because they were Irish tops, with cute hats perched high Irish merriment abounding, and jolly singing.

And there were the O'Fred O'Heisners whose wearin' o' hats "took the cake."

Tail Twisters ranged the range, or wherever it is that lions range. They had fun, and many were the shrieks as a wiggly snake dangled suddenly before the Lionesses.

Jimmy Nelson of Chicago had his "Charlie McCarthy" there. He was a bright boy, although he said bad things about his boss, Jimmy did a nice job at ventriloquizing.

It was a lot of fun, as everybody there will agree. Maybe next year, when the editor knows more people, more Lions and Lionesses players will get picked on.

President Sangmeister introduced the Editor of the News-Bulletin. This was not in the fun period...but, we're wondering.

Not funny. Miss Kathryn Lambrecht was scheduled to sing. But who can sing with the flu. She couldn't be there.

ROBERT STOLL OF NEW LENOX BADLY
BURNED AS FUMES IGNITE CLOTHING

by Dolores Anderson

Robert Stoll of the south subdivision of New Lenox was seriously burned yesterday morning when his clothes were ignited while he was burning rubbish.

The youth, 19 years of age, is an employee of Sherrill Rahm's Cities Service Station. His face, arms and leg were badly burned, and it is reported that he will be confined to the hospital for some time.

Quick and heroic action by Willis Couch, 24, also employed at the station saved Mr. Stoll from much greater burns. Mr. Couch, a navy veteran, upon hearing the screams of the burning man, ran to him and threw him on the ground, rolling him over and over until the flames were extinguished.

The victim was taken to Silver Cross hospital in Joliet by A. W. Walsh of New Lenox.

FRANCE LETTER TELLS GRATITUDE
OF CHILDREN FOR FRANKFORT GIFTS

Gifts sent to France by children of Frankfort school have brought a happy letter of gratitude from a French teacher whose children were among those receiving the gifts.

WILL COUNTY'S 176 SCHOOL DISTRICTS' ELECTIONS SET

Louis F. Bottino, Will county superintendent of schools, calls attention to the fact that Saturday April 12, is the date on which school elections throughout Will county's 176 school districts will be held.

It is to be noted that there are two types of school districts, board of director districts and board of education districts.

Board of director districts, which are usually found in rural areas, are districts which when organized contain a population of less than 1,000 inhabitants. Board of education districts are those which when organized had a population of more than 1,000 inhabitants. Nominating petitions are not required by candidates for membership on the board of board of director school districts. The statutes provide that in board of education districts nominating petitions for membership on the board must be filed with the secretary of the board 21 days before the day of election.

Saturday, March 22 is the last day on which nominating petitions may be filed in school districts governed by a board of education.

Nominating petition blanks are available thru the secretary of the board or at the office of the county superintendent of schools.

COLLEGE, ASST. SUPT. JOLIET HIGH

Elmer Rowley of Lockport has been appointed dean of Joliet Junior College and assistant superintendent of Joliet Township high school.

The appointment was made early last week.

Mr. Rowley has been a member of the teaching staff of the high school through the past five years. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Rowley of Lockport.

During his tenure at the township high school, Mr. Rowley has had charge of the vocational agriculture program and assisted in conducting and establishing a number of adult courses in the community.

The new appointee was a member of the teaching staff of Bloom Township high school, Chicago Heights from 1931 until he joined Joliet township high school in 1942. In the period of his service with the Bloom school he served in Honolulu, 1936-1937, in an exchange of teachers.

Weber Withdraws
Appeal vs. Hentsches

An action against William Hentsch and his son, Fred Hentsch of Mokena, on appeal by William J. Weber, also of Mokena, to the county court, was withdrawn by Mr. Weber last week.

The action was begun when Mr. Weber filed suit against the Hentsches last summer, alleging that the defendants had wrongfully taken away straw and corn wood cut on the property, and for damages to buildings.

The case was tried before Justice of the Peace John C. Lang, Joliet, in July, who exonerated the defendants on the ground that a written lease between the two parties did not restrict removal of straw during tenancy, and that the tenants were within their rights in removing the straw from the farm at the conclusion of their tenancy.

Justice Lang also ruled that removal of the wood which the plaintiff charged was illegally taken actually was removed through authority vested in the tenants by the former landlord and owner, Laurel E. Peterson. The decision also held that the defendants had done no damage to the farm.

Mr. Weber appealed the decision to the county court and through his attorney withdrew the appeal when the case reached trial recently. This action leaves the justice court's decision as effective and final.

The Hentsches were tenants on the Peterson farm through many years.

Krusemark and Krusemark's law firm represented the defendant's in the case.

Homer Church Hears
Lockport Pastor

Homer church last Sunday conducted a township survey to determine the number of persons without church allegiance. Part of its purpose was to develop church connection for those presently unattached.

The survey was directed by the Rev. Milton Heitzman of Lockport, who also was guest speaker for Homer church service. The church survey was conducted in the afternoon, with 10 teams covering most of the township. At the morning service Miss Shirley Burch sang a pleasing solo.

Following the service and before the teams left for the survey, a lunch prepared by Miss June Wilton was served in the church.

A review of the survey was held at a Wednesday evening meeting.

Mokena Bowlers

The Standings

Mokena Oilers	45	39
Mokena Wallpaper Co.	45	39
Robinson's Tavern	44	40
Braun's Recreation	43	41
Cooper & Hostert	41	43
Mokena State Bank	34	50

The Oilers won two games from the fading Paperhangers and gained a tie for the lead. L. Mueller led the Oilers team with a 546 series. Those high-flying Robins are off on a winning streak as they brushed aside the Bankers for three games and they are now only one game out of the lead.

The V-Eighters won two games from the Inconsistent Smokers. Hugo Neithammer had a 200 game for the V-Eighters. Looks like some hectic games are due as the teams battle, since the lead the Robins so far is the only team that is putting in a stretch drive.

BAPTISM PALM SUNDAY

House Warming Party
For Burton Breiderts

The Burton Breiderts of Frankfort were happy enough, last Friday, finally to enter into possession of the new home they have been planning and waiting for these many months.

Mr. and Mrs. Breidert moved in. Then others moved in, and these "movers" were loaded with good things to eat and arrived to help the Breiderts celebrate the event.

The visitors were paternal relatives, and when they arrived they proceeded to plan a banquet as a proper celebration in the new home.

A banquet table quickly was prepared, and the Rev. Erich Bizer conducted a dedicatory service.

Miss Kathryn Lambrecht sang, "God Bless This House" and William Wilson read a poem suited to the occasion.

The table was centered with a gorgeous bouquet of pink sweet peas, yellow jonquils and white carnations in a large crystal bowl flanked on either side with tall pale green candles in crystal holders.

Guests included Mrs. Kate Lankenau, grandmother; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Breidert, parents; Miss Viola Lankenau and Miss Emma Breidert, aunts; the Herbert Lambrecht, the Ed. Warning, the Fred Kohlhaugen, families; the Victor Eisenbrandt family, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew and Harlan Eisenbrandt, the William Wilsons, the Ray Hansons, Mrs. Carrie Wilson and son Alex.

Others were Rev. and Mrs. Erich Bizer, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heusner and Mrs. Minnie Klepper.

The Breiderts were presented with a sum of money by the group.

FRANKFORT'S FIRE CHIEF
REPORTS YEAR MINUS FIRE

Frankfort fire fighters have been free of fire-fighting through the last year, according to Fire Chief Fred Kohlhaugen.

"It has been more than a year since we were last called out," the chief told a News-Bulletin reporter, adding, "That is a fine compliment for the people in our fire territory, since without their cooperation and carelessness we could not have such a record. Frankfort fire fighters' area is approximately six miles wide and 14 miles long, the territory including 178 farms.

Flu Hits George Sangmeister

Frankfort's George C. Sangmeister of the electric shop was back at work Tuesday after several days of fighting flu. When we stopped in to see him he showed signs of his illness, and needed a bit of rest for the big evening ahead of him, when he had to preside at the annual charter night affair of the Lions Club, of which he is president. He was not too ill, however, to remind us that last week we left out his advertisement. But it's in this week.

League Basketball
Series Next Week

The first annual basketball tournament of the Southwest Basketball league will be held at the Tinley Park school Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday of next week. Seven towns have two teams each entered in this tournament. Orland Park, Tinley Park, New Lenox, Mokena, Matteson, Hazelcrest, and Midlothian will compete for championship honors in both an "A" division and a "B" division.

The opening game, scheduled for 7:30 Thursday evening, will be between Matteson "B" team and Midlothian "B" team. These two teams are on an evenly matched basis. At 8:30 Thursday evening, the Matteson "A" team will meet the Midlothian "A" team in the first game of the "A" division tournament.

Four games are scheduled for Friday night beginning at 6:15, when Hazelcrest "B" team meets Tinley Park "B" team. Tinley Park has previously beaten Hazelcrest in a game played at Tinley Park. At 7:15 New Lenox "B" team meets the Mokena "B" team, and this should be a real game, since in a previous game the New Lenox team won over Mokena by one point. Hazelcrest "A" team will play Tinley Park "A" team at 8:15 Friday, when Hazelcrest will try to reverse a previous game won earlier in the season. New Lenox "A" team is pitted against Mokena "A" team at 9:15 Friday evening. In previous games this season New Lenox won over Mokena.

The second round of the tournament will begin Saturday night with games at 6:15, 7:15, 8:15, and 9:15. Orland Park coming in to the play for the first time due to the fact that they drew a bye in the first round. Orland Park will play the winner of the New Lenox-Mokena game. Orland Park has been the team to beat all season, finishing the season in first place, and is picked as the favorite in the tournament next week.

On Sunday afternoon two games are scheduled beginning at 2 o'clock. These two games represent consolation games, with the finals being played Sunday night, the "B" teams at 7, and the "A" teams at 8 o'clock.

The doors will open one-half hour before game time at each of the sessions.

Boy for Milton Bettenhausens

There's a new fellow in the Milton Bettenhausen family. The young man arrived in Silver Cross hospital, Joliet Sunday, March 9.

WE HAVE been reading lately, from something like a dozen spring training camps, about the number of amazing rookies that have come along.

This happens every spring. It has been going on for some 50 years. It is only natural that it should be this way, for the rookie is usually young, keen, ambitious and thinks only in terms of today. The veteran has to think in terms of next summer, as he nurses his waning arm and none too certain legs.

TY COBB

Spring is the rookie's happy hunting ground. It would be a wonderful thing for the game if they all could make good, but as one veteran manager told me lately—"All I can ask for is one, or maybe two. That would be a big average."

So far the Dodgers and the Giants seem to have discovered the leading rookie phenoms. But if either team can start the new season with two rookies who are good enough to win a job away from some regular, they will be two lucky ball clubs.

Now and then you hear about "another Cobb" or "another Ruth." Suppose we check back on these two famous names.

Cobb reported to Augusta in the Sally league in 1904, where he batted .237 in 37 games.

I was working in Atlanta that year and I heard no great uproar about Cobb being "another Wagner." Ty's best press agent was Ty.

Ty joined the Tigers in 1905 where he batted .240 in 41 games that season and there was no overwhelming chorus about coming greatness. He jumped to .320 in 1906—and from then on it was something else again—.377 in 1909, .385 in 1910, .420 in 1911 and .410 in 1912.

Ruth Known as Pitcher

In 1914, Babe Ruth's fame belonged to pitching. No one had anything to say about his hitting. In 46 games with Baltimore and Providence, that 1914 season, the Babe batted .231. My record book shows that he hit one home run that year. In his first five years as a pitcher with the Red Sox, the Babe averaged slightly over .300 with no great home run record. That came later.

Frank Frisch was no terror when he broke into Giant ranks, right out of Fordham in 1919. In 54 games that season with the Giants he hit only .226. Not so hot for a rookie, even one just out of college. But McGraw still had full faith in him and the Fordham Flash moved up to .280. A year later, in 1921, he was up to .341, winding up as one of the great second basemen of all time. Maybe not the greatest—but up among the best.

Hank Greenberg batted only .214 with Hartford in 1930. He moved up to .290 with Beaumont in 1932. But he reached .301 with Detroit in 1933.

The greatest pitching rookie that I recall was Grover Cleveland Alexander. Reporting from Syracuse to the lowly Phillies in 1911, Alex won 28 games his first year. He was a rookie you dream about.

Among the all-time rookies I find that Chuck Klein of the Phillies, Lou Gehrig of the Yankees and Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics were around the top—possibly the best. They began tearing down fences shortly after arrival. The year 1946 had its full share of exceptional rookies, including Del Ennis of the Phillies, Furillo, Whitman and Edward of the Dodgers.

"The second year is the big test," Frank Frisch tells me. "That's the test for the hot rookie and the young fellow moving up. Good rookies often fold up after a good first year. They take too much for granted. Some slower starters can press them a mile in the second season. Smarter fellows with more hustle."

This new season may be packed with exceptional rookies, facing G.I. veterans who were not too hot last year. It will be an interesting study to see how they come along.

The Top for 1947

A correspondent has asked us to forecast sport's top name of the year for 1947. What was sport's top name for 1946—Joe Louis, Eddie Dyer, Leo Durocher, Bob Feller, Stan Musial, Ted Williams, Hank Greenberg, Armed, Assault, Red Blaik, Frank Leahy, Jack Kramer, Ben Hogan, Eddie Arcaro, Bob Waterfield, Charlie Trippi, Davis and Blanchard, Joe Cronin? Suppose you try to pick a name from this list.

There was certainly no Babe Ruth around last season. There was no Ty Cobb. There was no Jack Dempsey. There was no Jim Thorpe, no Knute Rockne, no Bobby Jones and no Walter Hagen.

My vote for 1946 would go to Stan Musial, the best all-around baseball player—Glenn Davis, the best all-around football player—Assault, the best horse, and Ben Hogan, the best golfer.

It takes the high mark of competition to make a top performer and Musial, Davis, Assault and Hogan took the lead.

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

Political Influence in House Centered in Two Regions

By WALTER A. SHEAD

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of articles covering the new congressional committees and their chairmen.)

WASHINGTON.—Political power in the house of representatives, following the same trend as in the senate, is centered largely in the northeastern and north central states in committee assignments under the reorganization act.

Michigan and New Jersey almost usurped chairmanships of the 17 new house committees formed under the act. These two states garnered nine of the committees, Michigan getting five and New Jersey four. Kansas and New York each secured two committee chairmanships, the others going to California, Illinois, Massachusetts and Minnesota. Joseph Martin, house speaker, also comes from Massachusetts and Charles Halleck, majority leader, is from Indiana.

Only one chairmanship went to states west of Kansas, namely Richard J. Welch of California, who is regarded as a political independent as a result of being nominated on both Republican and Democratic tickets for several years.

The list of new house committees and their chairmen follows:

Appropriations

JOHN TABER (N. Y.), new chairman of the house appropriations committee, has been one of the most vocal advocates of governmental economy. While he was the ranking minority member of the committee which he now heads, he consistently introduced amendments to appropriations bills in an attempt to reduce federal expenditures.

Always a foe of government "press agents," Taber recently recommended that all government information programs be cleaned out in the interest of "American liberty and freedom of the press." Taber, who automatically becomes a member of the joint committee on the budget, has fought for a marked reduction in federal expenditures. He proposes for one thing to cut one million persons from the federal payroll.

According to an analysis of controversial roll calls in 1946, Taber voted with the majority of his party 95 per cent of the time. He has an excellent attendance record, being absent for only one out of 130 roll call votes in 1946.

Taber, who is 66, was born in Auburn, N. Y., where he still lives. After graduating from Yale and the New York Law school, he practiced law from 1904 until he was elected to congress in 1922. The 38th district in upstate New York, which he has represented since that time, has long been overwhelmingly Republican. A third of its population live on farms and the rest in small cities and towns. The Farm Bureau federation and the National Grange are well organized. Labor is not politically significant.

Education and Labor

FRED A. HARTLEY JR. (N. J.), chairman of the new committee on education and labor, generally has followed Republican labor policy but sometimes has deserted his party on other issues.

The new committee takes over the functions of the two old committees on education and on labor. Hartley was a member of the labor committee.

The 10th New Jersey district, which Hartley represents, includes parts of Hudson and Essex counties and seven wards of the city of Newark. In his primary campaign for renomination last summer, Hartley was opposed by the PAC on the basis of his fight against OPA and was accused of being a representative of the manufacturing and retail lobbies. But he was renominated by a two-to-one margin and won in November.

Hartley, who is 44 years old, is the only living person after whom an aerie of the Fraternal Order of Eagles has been named. He was appointed to the Kearny, N. J., library commission in 1923—before he was old enough to vote—and elected municipal commissioner in 1924 when he was 21 years old. The next year he was chairman of the Republican county committee, and in 1928 he was elected to congress.

The committee's general jurisdiction over education and labor bills includes the school-lunch program, which previously has been handled by the agriculture committee.

Hartley

Banking and Currency

Assumption by JESSE P. WOLCOTT (MICH.) of the chairmanship of the powerful banking and currency committee heralds a violent shift in orientation of that group. Wolcott has been a consistent opponent of government control of business. He was the author of amendments to limit the power of OPA in both sessions of the 79th congress. In the long house debate on the veterans' emergency housing program, he led the Republican fight against subsidies and price ceilings on existing homes. After the November elections, he announced that investigation of the "outrageously bad" veterans' housing situation "must be the first order of business for the committee."

Wolcott also is generally credited with helping to prevent a report by the committee on the Wagner-Elender-Taft long-range housing bill in the face of repeated requests for action by the President. Wolcott's own 1946 housing bill provided some government support for homes for middle and upper income groups and pointedly omitted public housing.

In one field, foreign economic policy, Wolcott has generally supported the administration. Considered the Republican monetary authority in the house, he was a delegate to the Bretton Woods conference and co-author with Brent Spence (Dem., Ky.) of legislation to implement it. Wolcott's district (7th Michigan) has been predominantly rural but during the war industrialization increased rapidly in the counties bordering on the Detroit area and automobiles and other iron and steel manufacturing now are becoming important.

Wolcott, born in 1893, practiced law in Detroit before entering the army in World War I. After the war he settled in his present home town of Port Huron, where he served as police judge and subsequently as prosecuting attorney of St. Clair county from 1921 until his election to congress in 1930.

Besides its general jurisdiction over banking and currency, Wolcott's committee handles legislation on housing, price control and certain types of financial aid to business.

Armed Services

Under the legislative reorganization act, a single armed services committee replaces the former house committees on military affairs and naval affairs. This is generally regarded as a boost for the army's legislative program, since seniority gives the chairmanship of the new committee to Walter G. Andrews (N. Y.), for years the ranking Republican on the military affairs committee. Andrews is reported as favoring universal military training, which is No. 2 on the army's program. On the No. 1 item—unification of the armed forces—Andrews has taken no public stand.

Analysis of controversial roll calls in 1946 shows that Andrews voted with the majority of his party four out of five times. However, he gave the administration more support than did former military affairs chairman, Andrew J. May (Dem., Ky.) on the controversial issue of drafting 18-year-olds, which May actively opposed. Andrews introduced a bill in the last session to require nine months' enlisted service of all appointees to West Point.

Fifty-seven years old, Andrews has a law degree from Princeton, where he was once football coach. He served with the AEF in France in World War I and was wounded in action. He is now a business man and director of Pratt and Lambert. His district (42nd New York) includes part of Buffalo and the city of Tonawanda; it is usually Republican. Principal industries are iron and steel, chemicals and railroading. Andrews has been in congress since 1931.

SALT LAKE CITY.—When a girl marries does the law require her to change her name or is this done through custom only?

Stumped by this poser, Secy. of State E. E. Monson, who had received the question by mail from a young woman, appealed to Atty. Gen. Grover A. Giles for the answer.

After a perusal of law books, Giles stated in his reply: "Although Utah statutes do not definitely state that when a girl marries she shall change her name, the law implies (and so does the marriage ceremony) that her name be changed."

Even the attorney general, however, apparently was not too sure of his ground, for he added as an afterthought: "This must be the case as it is necessary for a court action for a girl to repossess her maiden name."

The Plowing Schogers Choose the NEW

Firestone

CHAMPION GROUND GRIP

CHAMPION FARMERS, and farmers generally, are changing to Firestone Champion Ground Grip tires... insisting upon them when they buy new tires... specifying them when they order new tractors.

That's because the new Champion cleans up to 100% more effectively; pulls up to 62% more; lasts up to 91% longer. And it rolls more smoothly over highways.

There are sound reasons for this superiority. The curved connected traction bars flare outward from the center, and mud falls freely from the wider shoulder openings. The extra high, curved, pyramid-like bars cut into the soil with a cleaving action, and because they are connected, the bars take a powerful "center bite" in the heart of the traction zone. Extra height, Triple-Bracing, and buttressing at the base give the traction bars greater strength... lengthen tire life. The curved connected bars are in continuous contact with the highway, insuring a smooth ride.

Insist upon Firestone Champion Ground Grips when you buy new tires, or order a new tractor. They cost no more than ordinary tractor tires.

Listen to the Voice of Firestone every Monday evening over NBC

They're called "The Plowing Schogers"—and with plenty of reason. Starting in 1930, and continuing for six consecutive years in Carl Schoger won six consecutive years in the National Plowing Match at Wheatland, Illinois. In 1930 and 1931 he won all three National Matches at Wheatland, Lily Lake, and Troy, Illinois. When he retired from competition in 1942, sons Clarence and Harry were ready to defend the family laurels. Last fall, Clarence won the National Matches at Troy and Wheatland. Harry, the younger son, won first in his class at Troy and tied for first at Wheatland.

The Schogers have always used Firestone Tires. You'll find new Champion Ground Grips on their tractors today.

THROW AWAY HARSH LAXATIVES!

Millions Have Ended Constipation with Healthful Fresh Fruit Drink

Don't form the habit of depending on harsh, griping laxatives until you've tried this easy, healthful way millions now use to keep regular.

It's fresh lemon juice and water taken first thing in the morning—just as soon as you get up, the juice of one Sunkist Lemon in a glass of water. Taken thus, on an empty stomach, it stimulates normal bowel action, day after day, for most people.

And lemons are actively good for you. They're among the richest sources of vitamin C, which combats fatigue, helps resist colds and infections. They supply vitamins B₁ and P, aid digestion and help alkalize the system.

Try this grand wake-up drink 10 mornings. See if it doesn't help you! Use California Sunkist Lemons.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 16, was:

"SUBSTANCE"

The Golden Text was:

"God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work" (II Cor. 9:8).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also... Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened" (Matt. 6: 19-21; 7: 7, 8).

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Do Men Like Women?

Maybe you read that recent article in a national magazine, claiming that American men don't really like the company of women. They just put them up on a pedestal and leave them there.

But I wouldn't say that that was so in our town. Look at any married couple—like the Cuppers. Jane wouldn't nag if Dee spent his evenings "with the boys"—but actually Dee likes nothing better than to stay home by the fire, sharing a glass of beer with Jane, playing cribbage, or just talking.

And when he does go out, for an afternoon of fishing down at Seward's Creek, or for an evening glass of beer at Andy Botkin's Garden Tavern, Jane is almost always with him (except when she's got a spot of baking in the oven).

From where I sit, respect doesn't rule out everyday companionship... and never should. They go together—essential parts of a successful marriage.

Joe Marsh

FARMER WINS AWARD

Another Illinois farmer will receive nationwide acclaim for outstanding farm performance March 22, when Henry Miller of Carroll county receives the W. G. Skelly award for superior achievement in agriculture.

Miller was born on the 118-acre farm he now operates. When he took over in 1920, the soil had been drained of its productivity so he began concentrating on soil conservation. Today his land is as productive as it was decades ago, but it took many years of hard work, study, liming and terracing. Years ago he began passing on his findings to his neighbors who all followed suit. They have never regretted it.

During the past three years, the Miller farm has averaged to market over 28,000 pounds of beef, 75,000 pounds of pork, 2,500 pounds of poultry meat, and about 10,000 dozen eggs. Corn yields average 82 bushels, oats 56, and 42 tons of sweet corn for canning. Miller will receive his award, consisting of a $100 U. S. savings bond, scroll and gold lapel button, presented in behalf of W. G. Skelly, president of Skelly Oil Company, at a breakfast in his honor Saturday morning.

INCREASE IN AUTO ACCIDENTS
BRING LIABILITY RATE RISE

Increases in automobile liability rates in Illinois, reflecting current loss conditions, have been announced by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. The new Illinois rates, which became effective March 17, apply to automobile bodily injury and property damage liability insurance.

The revised rates are the direct result of the heavy increase in the relative number of automobile liability claims received and of the much greater cost of settling these claims. Since the end of gasoline rationing, the frequency of claims submitted to insurance companies has increased in keeping with the mounting number of traffic accidents. In addition, it now costs at least 30 percent more to settle the average bodily injury claim than it did in 1941, while the cost of settling the average property damage claim is up approximately 80 percent.

Old cars driven at high speed is reported as one cause for increasing the claims, while just plain carelessness is said to have increased since the end of the war.

U. S. SAVINGS BONDS SALE
CONTINUES HIGH IN ILLINOIS

The people of Illinois continued their heavy purchases of U. S. savings bonds in February, and sales for the month totaled $54,161,600, according to Arnold J. Rauen, state director of the Treasury's U. S. savings bonds division.

Even though February had only 22 business days, the Series E sales were $22,800,070; Series F $3,647,330 and Series G $17,714,200. The total exceeded that of February last year by a small amount.

One factor responsible for the large volume is that investment buyers want to get their annual E Bond limit of $5,000 maturity value as early in the calendar year as possible. But the steady purchasing on the payroll savings plan and the regular buying through banks and other issuing agents show that the people appreciate the merit of the world's No. 1 investment, and the value of a good savings habit," said Mr. Rauen.

LAUGHING IS RELAXING AID

Just hearing a good hearty laugh sometimes alters completely one's frame of mind. Laughter frequently is said to be infectious; the vein of merriment communicates itself to the listener and makes him smile. The fact that someone else is amused or happy serves as an emotional pick-up to many persons, it is pointed out in a health talk released by the educational committee of the Illinois State Medical Society.

Perhaps the chief value of laughter in health is its association with relaxation of the mind and body, since relaxation plays an important part in reducing fatigue.

With nerve tension lessened, a person appears more at ease. A smile or a laugh is far more pleasant than a frown or a growl. Anything that contributes to ease tension and create announces $20,000,000 price reductions

We believe there is nothing more important to this country than to lower the prices of the goods that people buy.

The American people have insisted that the government withdraw from its attempts to control prices in peacetime. That places the responsibility where it belongs—in the hands of business and industry. Not all business can reduce prices now. Not all can reduce by the same amount.

Our company has felt a duty to act as promptly as possible. In our case, the business outlook now makes it possible to move toward the goal of lower prices. The only way out of the vicious circle of higher and higher prices is to break through.

We have taken this step not because of present competitive conditions nor because of a drop in demand from customers. We have taken it because of our belief that ANY PRICE IS TOO HIGH IF IT CAN BE REDUCED.

These reductions, which will save the users of our products approximately $20,000,000 a year, will become effective before April 1, and will apply to a selected list of tractor, farm machine, motor truck, and industrial power products. Since we lose money on a few of our products, and barely break even on some others, these reductions will not apply to our entire line. Reductions will be made individually on products. Some will be cut more than others. Exact details will be announced as soon as possible.

Our ability to maintain this lower level of prices will depend in part on what happens to the prices and flow of materials that we buy from others. Because we believe price reduction is vital, we are willing to assume the risks that are involved.

prices had not gone up as much or as fast as many others

Here are Average Price Increases since 1941

All Manufactured Products	63.7%
(U. S. Government Reports)
Metals and Metal Products	41.2%
(U. S. Government Reports)
Motor Trucks	35%
Industrial Power Products	34%
Farm Machines	25%

These benefits to customers will depend, too, on uninterrupted production at reasonable wage levels. This is not a program that can be carried out if it is hampered by strikes or work stoppages.

Our employees have had substantial increases in pay, and wage questions are currently being discussed with many of the unions with which we deal. Stockholders have recently had an increase in dividend rate. Having considered the interests of these two groups, we are now making these price reductions for the benefit of the third group—our customers.

Business, to our way of thinking, has a social as well as an economic responsibility. This company has long followed the policy of operating in the interests of three groups—its customers, its employees and its stockholders. The duty of the management is to see that equal justice is done as between the three groups.

This price reduction program is another demonstration of our policy in action.

MIRACLE VILLAGE IN PATH OF ETNA LAVA . . . Erupting Mt. Etna and streams of lava rolling down its sides form an imposing backdrop for the little village of Passo Pisciaro directly in the path of the Sicily flaming lava. A number of new craters belching flaming lava appeared on volcanic Mt. Etna, but what the Sicilian peasants regard as a miracle, Passo Pisciaro and other hamlets at the foot of the volcano have not yet been engulfed by the river of lava.

JUMPS TO RECORD . . . Irv Mondschien, New York university, is shown establishing a new record in the high jump event at the 26th annual IC-4A indoor championship held in Madison Square Garden, New York City. The champion cleared the bar at 6 feet, 7 1/4 inches.

FOOD FOR THE WORLD . . . Itsy, Bitsy and Betsy huddle together in a basket as their mother watches over them. Triplets are not an everyday occurrence in the sheep world—in fact, rather rare. This San Antonio, Tex., mother is doing her part to raise food for the starving people of the world, as well as wool to help keep them warm next winter. Present indications are that every ounce of wool that can be produced will be needed next winter.

LOST ON HIS WALK . . . As bedtime approaches Matt Greer, 4, watches sleepily from his desk perch as Lt. Conrad Walter records his story at Bergen street station, Brooklyn. Matt went for a walk with another "guy" and was found wandering in the streets by police. Soon after the photograph was taken Matt's mother located him at the police station and took him home. The "guy" Matt started walking with ran off with his overshoes.

WANTS DEBT REDUCED . . . Sen. William F. Knowland (Rep., Calif.), claims to be winning support in his fight for a budget amendment to earmark three billion dollars for public debt reduction before any reduction is made in income taxes.

RAILROAD SHRINKER . . . William C. MacMillan Jr., New York, who has been named president of the Federation for Railway Progress, and as such will have a leading role in the "railway shrinkage" program inaugurated by Robert R. Young.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Liberalizes Insurance

President Truman has signed a new law, one of the first passed by the 80th congress, which further liberalizes the national service life insurance act for World War II veterans who have permitted their term insurance policies to lapse.

The new law gives the Veterans' administrator authority to determine the conditions of reinstatement by administrative regulation. Some of the provisions of the new law are:

1—Extends the deadline for reinstatement from February 1, 1947, to August 1, 1947;

2—A veteran may obtain permanent NSLI from VA without the previous necessity of first holding term insurance;

3—Automatic conversion, in certain cases, to a permanent plan for policyholders who are totally disabled. Under the old law, if they failed to convert within the term period their insurance protection lapsed.

4—All NSLI policies provide for a waiver of premiums for veterans who become totally disabled for six or more consecutive months and even though premiums are waived.

(Editor's Note: War department is refusing to supply addresses of men in service except to their immediate family. Due to this ruling, it will be impossible for us to secure addresses except for wives, children, parents, brother or sister of the serviceman.)

Questions and Answers

Q. My husband and I were married and had two children before World War I, in which he participated. He was wounded in action and gets a pension. Several years ago he obtained a divorce from me and has remarried. I was given a monthly amount which will run out in a short time. I am not able to work. Would I be entitled to a government pension? Where can I get information about this? What I get now is barely enough for necessities as prices are so high.—F. B., Goodland, Kans.

A. The chances are you are not entitled to a government pension and neither would you be entitled to a widow's pension since you are not legally the veteran's wife. The only method by which you might be able to obtain a part of the veteran's pension is by mutual agreement or by some court action. Would suggest that you contact the attorney in the nearest Veterans' administration office, since laws in force in the several states govern largely.

Q. I am writing for information as to whether I can draw anything or not. I am a widow of a war veteran of World War II. We were separated at the time he went into service, although we were never divorced and I am not drawing his insurance. He was killed in action in 1943 and, as I am not able to work, I want to know if I can draw the maintenance for my support.—Widow, Dallas, Tex.

A. Apparently you are still the legal wife of the veteran, not being divorced, and you likely would be entitled to a widow's pension for the death of your husband. Even if divorced, if the divorce was granted because of misconduct of the veteran and not your own misconduct, you likely would be entitled to a pension. I do not believe you could draw any back allotment or gratuity payment, although you might write to the Office of Dependency Benefits, 4200 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo. Suggest, however, that you contact your nearest office of Veterans' administration and ask about a widow's pension.

Q. I would like to know who is head of the old age pension of North Carolina. Also how much a person in North Carolina is supposed to draw per month.—M. S. P., Walnut Cove, N. C.

A. Although this question apparently does not pertain to veterans affairs, suggest you contact the County Superintendent of Public Welfare at Winston-Salem for answers to your questions. Each county in North Carolina operates its own old age pension.

Q. When man and wife, both veterans, go to college what is their subsistence allowance under the G.I. bill? So far I have received two different answers to this question and I would like a definite and official one.—L. J. M., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. Here's the official one. Veterans' administration says when both man and wife are qualified veterans taking educational training under the G.I. bill, the man receives $90 per month and the woman $65. A new regulation, will provide that where there are children, the woman also will receive $90.

Twenty Million Acres May Be Unprofitable

Salt Proving Ruin to Much Irrigated Land

Accumulation of salt is proving a continuing hazard to crop production on much of the 20 million acres of irrigated land in the Western states.

Losses from reduction in yield and quality of crops may occur on lands containing some salt but not enough to throw them out of production. It has been estimated by the U. S. regional salinity laboratory, which is working on this problem, that in many cases such losses amount to 10 to 25 per cent of the yield.

Irrigation always presents a problem in removal of salt excess in the soil.

Many saline and alkali soils are low in available phosphorus and will give better crop yields if phosphate fertilizers are used. Superphosphate, treble superphosphate and ammonium phosphate are among those generally recommended.

During reclamation of saline soil, caused by accumulation of salt due to irrigation, many farmers find it helpful to apply several tons of gypsum per acre, flood the land inside the levees for a week or more, dry out the soil in the basins and then flood again. When a high water table exists, the upward movement of saline ground water results in a continuing accumulation of salt in the surface soil.

Herds and Flocks

Teach early pigs to eat grain and protein by providing a feeder in a creep—where they can go and eat while still nursing the sow. This way the pigs won't quit gaining when weaned from the sow.

If you neglected to keep a record of farrowing dates, you can come pretty close to telling when pigs will arrive by examining the sow's udder. Most sows farrow about 24 hours after milk starts filling the udder.

Poultry disease is less of a problem when young chicks are kept apart from older birds. Selling off all old hens and raising a new batch of pullets each year is a paying practice. An all-pullet laying flock, the poultry experts call it.

Trim wool from around the ewe's udder before lambing time. A newborn lamb will sometimes suck a lock of wool instead of a teat. Result, starvation.

Newborn calves should have the cow's first milk (colostrum) because it is richer in vitamin A than milk produced some time after freshening.

Knock on Henhouse Door Pleases 'Girls'

Ladies are sticklers for etiquette and hens are no exception, according to Arthur Gannon, poultryman of the Georgia extension service.

Etiquette demands a knock on the door before entering an occupied room, he points out, and this is a good point to observe when visiting the poultry house.

When the poultry house door is opened suddenly, hens flutter around and scamper for the back of the shed in the excitement. As a result, egg production drops.

On the other hand, if the poultryman raps gently on the door of the house and then waits for a moment or two before entering, the hens become ready for the entrance of the visitor. There is no excitement and no drop in egg production, he says.

Filling Up Cracks in Chicken Gizzard

Cracks or crater-like holes in the gizzard linings of chickens are caused by too little anti-gizzard-erosion material in the feed.

This condition does not seem to slow growth or cause death. However it is common in chicks that have been mismanaged, and is, therefore, often blamed for poor growth and death. Good sources of anti-gizzard-erosion are alfalfa products, mill run, bran and greens.

Sap Lambs
Lambs infected with stomach worms, scab mites and ticks are sapped of their energy and will not make the best use of their feed until they are cured of the parasites.

Bright Glassware

To keep glassware bright, wipe as soon as pieces are removed from suds and rinsed in hot water. Tumblers that contained milk should be rinsed in cold water before washing.

Clean Fixtures

Metal fixtures such as door knobs, door hinges, metal racks, and radiators can be cleaned easily with a stiff brush and hot soapy water. Dry with a clean cloth.

Developed Motors

In 1884, Frank J. Sprague, pioneer in the industrial development of electric motors and electric railways, exhibited his first direct current motor.

Refrigerator Shelves

To remove rust from refrigerator shelves, clean them first with a mild scouring powder and hot water, then cover them with a thin coating of paraffin.

Supplies Nutrients

Phosphate applications to the soil enable plants, animals and humans to obtain the phosphorus needed for their normal development.

City of Gardens

Lisbon, city of gardens and parks, enjoys spring-like climate all the year. Its temperature averages about 50 in the winter.

Sizing Kiddies

Children's clothing should be sized according to height and hip circumference rather than by age.

Test New Grasses

About 20 potential new species of range forage grasses are under test at University of California.

There are 125,000 beauty parlors in the U. S.

DOAN'S PILLS

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Jill McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, is in love with Lieut. Spang Gordon. She is upset to learn her brother, Ric, is in love with Sandra Calvert, an older woman. During her absence, Richard visits her mother, Julia, and tells her he is now Captain Mackey. Julia is heart-sick at his lack of interest in the past. Richard sees Ric and tells him he knew his father in France. Later he threatens Sandra, but she marries Ric anyway. He has the boy transferred and Sandra arrives at the farm to live. Julia hears from Richard who tells her he made an attempt to prevent the marriage. She is thankful that he has shown himself to be a father at last.

CHAPTER XVI

Foster, she was thinking irritably, could at least have unloaded that odorless bag of fertilizer from the back! Or was that a part of Jill's and John I.'s diabolical contriving? The old man had been as impish and secretive as a warlock this morning.

Sandra wrinkled her nose as she got into the seat and brushed off the cushion a bit fretfully with her handkerchief. She asked, "Is it very far?" as Julia came back from superintending the loading of the luggage, and slipped the key into the ignition.

"Five miles. A breeze in ordinary times. Now we never come in unless we have to. Our tire quota is small in this county, and even with a priority we have to wait for months."

"I hope Ricky's tires are good," Sandra remarked. "I'd rather counted on joining him soon. It's absurd to be separated uselessly, I think."

"Ricky's tires?" Julia repeated, a bit puzzled. "Ricky told me about his red roadster. He was so sorry to have to give it up," Sandra babbled on. "I'm sure he'd expect me to use it."

So, Julia thought unhappily, Ric was turning into a McFarlane liar, too! How was she to explain to this eager, greedy woman that the red roadster belonged to Jill? John I. had bought it for her, had resented it whenever Jill loaned the car to Ric. Ric had had a car the last year he had been in college, but he had traded it off, impulsively, to buy a quarter interest in a plane that one of the co-owners had crashed and burned soon after.

"Ric must have forgotten that he disposed of his car last year," she said. "So much has happened since he enlisted that it got out of his mind. There is a red roadster on the place, but it belongs to his sister, and it's put up, too."

"Oh," Sandra was obviously upset. "He talked so much about it—I can't understand it."

Julia was grateful when at last the gate-posts and white pillars of Buzzard's Hill came into view.

"Oh," breathed Sandra. "That's the place, isn't it? I recognize it from the picture Ricky has. It's beautiful!"

"It's very old," Julia said. "The house was built by slaves, the brick was made right on the place. But we like it."

The others were waiting on the lawn. (Oh, Jill, why did you have to have on those dreadful overalls? Julia was thinking.) Her broken arm in a grimy looking sling, her pretty hair tied up in a bandana, a feed bucket in her hand, Jill came forward, grinning.

"Hi, Sandy!" she shouted. "You're just in time. We need another hand with the pigs."

Sandra said, "How do you do?" nervously. Shook hands with John I., appraised him briefly, and then ignored him. She made a little gesture with her tinted fingers. "My trunk—"

"My gosh," muttered Jill. "There's nobody here to carry it upstairs. Foster's away over the hill pulling corn. You'll have to unpack it out here, I guess, Sandra, and carry the stuff upstairs."

"Oh, but I couldn't! All my dresses—and shoes and things!"

"We'll manage some way, Sandra," Julia said.

She led Sandra up the stairs to Ric's old room, noting instantly that Jill had removed the good candle-wick counterpane and replaced it with a faded green madras thing from Mamie's quarters.

"I hope you'll be comfortable here," she said. "The bath is next door down the hall, and we have supper at six."

"Thank you—I think I'll lie down," Sandra looked wan.

Some Coffee For the Guest

Julia heard the old four-poster squeak, before she reached the head of the stairs. She was a little angry with Jill. There was no point in carrying this thing to absurdity. But when she found the two of them on the screen porch, drinking from cold bottles of pop, she knew by the glint in Jill's eye and the twitching of old John I.'s mustache that anything she could say would fall on deaf ears.

"You could have thought a little about the reputation of the house, at least," she complained. "That horrible old counterpane!"

"Don't you weaken now, Dooley," Jill warned. "She's not going to pull any Queen of Sheba stuff on us."

"You're being very crude," Julia said coldly. "She'll see that it's all a gag. I think I'll take up some cold orange juice. After all, she is our guest—today at least."

"Dooley, you'll ruin everything! Take her up a pair of slacks and tell her we feed the pigs at five o'clock."

"She'll bust all that red paint off her finger-nails," John I. chortled. But Julia was firm. She carried the little tray up to Ric's room, but when she came down there was an odd, tight expression around her mouth.

"She asked me if there was any whiskey in the house. She said she felt faint."

Jill's eyes sparkled. "Go and get Foster's jug of corn, Gramp. The one he hides in the pump-room."

It was too swiftly evident that Sandra would never be a part of Buzzard's Hill. She came down to supper, languid and cool in a green silk frock, every curl in place.

Dishes of grits, sausage and scrambled eggs were in the middle of the table.

"Mamie doesn't serve at night," Julia explained. "She has been canning peaches to-day, and she's tired. Will you have buttermilk, Sandra? Or perhaps you'd rather have some tea?"

"That will do—If you haven't any coffee," Sandra sighed.

"Rationed," Jill said. "You wouldn't remember that, living in a hotel."

"We could make Sandra one cup of coffee," Julia said. "After all, she's had a hard trip."

She went to the kitchen and dripped some hot water through fresh grounds under Mamie's disapproving eyes.

"Now I got to use them grounds over for breakfast, and you won't like it," Mamie grumbled.

Sandra murmured, "Thank you" faintly when the cup was put before her.

Foster had been bullied by Julia into carrying the trunk up the stairs, and as soon as the meal was ended Sandra went up to unpack.

"I'll bet on one thing," Jill said grimly. "I'll bet she hasn't any money. And how can she go to join Ric, when he'll be sent off to war? Are you planning to be patient and sweet with her for the duration, Dooley?"

"As long as she's Ric's wife and under our roof, I'll be kind," Julia said, with firmness. "I never had a mother-in-law, but I know what I would have liked her to be."

Sandra Presents A New Problem

"Your mother-in-law wouldn't have had a daughter-in-law like your daughter-in-law, Mrs. McFarlane. Every time she passes a mirror she stops and does something to her eyebrows! Some time when she does that I'll start screeching at her."

Sandra was wandering around the upper floor when Julia went up. There was a trace of slyness in Sandra's eyes, a smug expression around her mouth.

"I didn't know we had mutual friends, Mrs. McFarlane," she said. "I knew Roger Mackey in the islands."

"Roger Mackey?" Julia caught her breath and fought for a casual attitude.

"I just happened to notice his picture there on Jill's dresser. A much younger picture, of course, but I'd know Rod anywhere."

"That," Julia had control now, "is a picture of Jill's father. He went to France in the last war. He did not come back."

True—it had to be true! Her children's father had not come back.

The man who had come back was an indifferent stranger.

"Oh, yes, Ricky told me. And I remember now that Rod Mackey told me that Richard's father was his friend. But the resemblance is remarkable—uncanny, really. You don't know Roger Mackey?"

"I have no friend whose name is Mackey," Julia answered, calmly.

But her hands were uncertain, and as she dressed, a cold fear pressed on her throat. This was something she had not foreseen, that Sandra could be a danger.

When Dave came he was a little stunned at the sight of Sandra.

"This is Ric's wife, Dave," Julia introduced them.

"You might have prepared me," Dave said. "After all, my arteries are hardening, and the aging should be protected from sudden shocks."

"How foolish!" Sandra cooed. "You know you aren't old, and I do hope I'm not a terrible shock?"

Jill, sprawled in a chair, ground her teeth.

"Dave means you're rather an abrupt addition to the McFarlane tribe," she said.

"Did Ric come home, too?"

"Oh, no, they sent him off to some horrible school," Sandra replied, quickly. "He's supposed to learn to be an officer, or maybe it's a gunner—he wasn't very certain about it. We hardly had time to say good-by."

"He'll probably make a good gunner, and I can't think of anything more important in a war than gunners."

Sandra drew her lips in piteously. "But he'll be in danger! Gunners ride in those planes. They're shot at. I can't bear to think about it."

"The thing to do then," said Jill curtly, "is not to think about it."

"This is a war where anybody can be shot at," Dave remarked. "The army and navy have no monopoly on danger."

"It's a war where almost anything can descend on you," drawled Jill. "And not always bombs and things in parachutes."

Dave said, "How about going to a movie, Dooley? I've got six gallons of gas left and a new ration ticket coming up Monday."

"Go along, Dooley," prodded Jill. Julia said, "You go with Dave, Jill. You haven't had any fun lately, either."

"No, I refuse, definitely. I wouldn't try to fix my hair and wiggle into clothes with only one arm to see Clark Gable in person. I picked corn today, Dave. In a splint. Tell that to the Russian women."

Sandra sat with her small feet crossed, a watchful look in her eyes.

"You must scold them for working so hard, Mr. Patterson," she said, sweetly. "I'm sure it's quite unnecessary."

Jill's feet hit the floor with a thud. Jill's eyes were the eyes of a bad filly.

"Sandra is a very naive person, Dave," she drawled in a deadly level voice. "Ric told her that we were country girls, and she believed it."

Sandra narrowed her tinted eyelids. "Oh, no," she said, coolly, "I do not believe all I hear, Jill. Sometimes I do not believe anything at all."

Antagonism cracked like static in the air, making Dave definitely uncomfortable.

"How about it, Dooley? Are you coming?" he asked.

"Go along, Dooley, don't be such a stick!" urged Jill. "Buy her a hot dog and some strawberry pop, Dave. Make her relax. She's been strung up like a fiddle for days."

"If this is a therapeutic treatment, I'm not going," Julia tried to laugh. "But if it's supposed to be fun, I might be tempted."

"It's for fun," Dave said. "But we'll miss the last show if we spend too much time talking about it."

"I'm sorry to leave you, Sandra," Julia tried to smooth the troubled air, as she prepared to go. "But there are some good programs on the radio."

"Don't start making company out of Sandra," Jill protested. "She's family. Family don't rate any special consideration."

Julia slumped in Dave's car and let her shoulders droop.

Julia Goes To a Show

"I shouldn't go," she said. "The girl's strange and a little edgy, and Jill has been acting like a fiend ever since we heard she was coming. I feel as though I had been riding a bomb ever since the train came in."

Dave said, soberly, "So Ric dumped another package of trouble in your lap! She's older than he is, isn't she?"

"She looks older. She must be. She's been married before. She and Jill won't get along at all, but what can I do? I can't turn Ric's wife out of the house."

"Don't worry — she won't get so venomous that Jill can't take care of herself. Odd that Ric, who was always so fastidious, would be attracted to a woman like that."

Savage Terriers

American bull terriers trained for pit fighting develop such savagery during a match that a winner will, if allowed, tear his dead opponent to pieces. Yet these animals are usually so friendly and gentle toward human beings that they are, as a rule, worthless as watchdogs.
